NOBODY COMING TO-NIGHT.

In the glow of the western window, Amber and opaline air, Flooding her eyes with beauty, Flaming her hair with light, The dear old mother is sitting, Watching the sunlight's flight: Alone by the western window— For nobody's coming to-night.

Crossing the level meadows, Through the ricks of the fragrant hay, Her neighbor is faring homeward After a toiling day. A sweet little wife is waiting With a kiss at the cottage door, And baby will toddle to meet him Over the kitchen floor.

In the lane, with its vines a-tangle, And its shadows like broken light, A fair girl waits for her lover, Who surely is coming to-night. Her gown is a fleece of silver, With ribbons of daintiest blue, And her eyes are a color to match them, So cloudless their violet hue.

The aged face at the window, All graven with patient lines, Takes note of the sweet girl's gladness, Revealed by so many signs; No envy her heart is stirring, As the glimmer of sunshine pales, For her loved ones are safe in the city Where never the glory fails.

Once there were little children Who called her "mother," ah, sweet; This house rang to the music Of their merry, romping feet. There was once a form beside her, A face that never grew old; Her own, in its manly beauty, Her own, with its hair of gold.

Now, in the grass-grown church-yard, And deep in the restless sea, Are the dear ones who filled the homestead With the sound of their boisterous glee. Ah, me! it is very silent To watch the far-away light, As it melts in the starlit heavens, When nobody's coming to-night.

By the bars of the western window, By the key of the evening star, Her thought climbs up to the meaning Of the beautiful gates ajar. There is wonderful bliss awaiting, In the regions of shadowless light, The soul that is peaceful and patient— But nobody's coming to-night.

It was but a little after three o'clock when it began to rain; but so thick were the clouds that it seemed as if night were already at hand. Johnny had dropped off into a light sleep, and she sat by the window that commanded a view of the garden, the level ground with the ravine below, and the hills stretching away towards Phippsburg and the river. The rain came down in torrents, and she noticed how quickly little rills formed and ran down between the rows and vegetables in the garden, and lost themselves in the stubble field beyond. The turkeys and chickens, deceived by the unusual darkness, had all sought their roosts, except here and there one who had been late about getting in and now stood with drooping tail feathers and a generally demoralized look beneath the thick leaves of some shrub or vine.

Then it occurred to her to save for washing purposes some of the water that was falling, soft water being a luxury during half the year on the mountain; and she threw an old shawl about her head and shoulders and went out and set the wash-tub and boiler under the eave spout, and saw them filled almost before she could turn back into the kitchen.

And now Johnny had wakened and was calling her. She went to him and felt her heart give a great throb as she noticed that his fever was higher than ever, and that his eyes had a strange look about them. She preserved her calm appearance, ministered to his wants, and when he asked for his father, told him that he had not returned, and that they must not look for him yet awhile, but that he would come by and by.

During a partial lull in the storm she ran out to the shed and milked the cows, which had come up of their own accord, and were contentedly chewing their cuds beneath the shelter. The horse left at home stood in his stall, and kept turning his ears back and sideways, as if to catch the sound of his returning mate, and she set her milk pail on the ground and threw him a bit of hay.

Returning to the house she lighted both of the lamps and took them into the sitting-room where Johnny lay, in order to make it seem as cheerful as possible. She had kept the wood-box full of dry wood all day, and now she prepared everything for the starting of a fire in the cook stove, and a little later, started it, and put the tea-kettle on.

Although it was quite dark now, she did not much expect her husband just yet, but wished to have everything ready to get him a cup of hot tea the moment he did come. She also brought out a suit of dry clothes and hung them by the fire ready for him to put on.

She could still see a little distance through the deepening gloom, and she observed that the water had cut bits of gulleys between the potato rows, and that the stubble field below had the appearance of having become a lake. The rain, too, instead of decreasing as the night set in, was, if possible, falling faster than ever; and she could hear a faint roar coming up from the ravine, and knew that soon the water would be rushing through it in great volume, and with a force that would overwhelm any living thing caught in its path; and a half dozen such ravines crossed the road over which her husband must pass in coming from Phippsburg.

She shuddered as she listened, and turning away, went and sat down by Johnny's crib and tried to interest him by reading a little story from a child's paper. But the boy was too sick to care for hearing her read; he wanted his father, and kept asking when he would come, to which she could only reply that they might look for him any moment now, but that the rain might make him late, and they must be patient.

And so the hours wore on and the rain continued to fall, while every moment the weight at her heart grew heavier and more oppressive. Johnny slept fitfully, waking every few moments and always asking "if father had not come yet," or "if his mother thought father would come home pretty soon now," until the sudden clap of thunder came, at which he was seized with an awful fright and screamed again and again with all the force of his weak lungs. Even his mother was startled into an involuntary exclamation by the suddenness of the concussion, and for an instant she thought the cottage had been caught in a land slide. She controlled herself at the sound of the child's cry, and bending down, lifted him tenderly in her arms, cuddling his poor wasted form to her breast as if he had been but a babe. It was only with difficulty that she checked his screams, and even then he was so fearful and nervous, and sobbed and begged so piteously for his father, that it was only by calling to her aid all the fortitude which she possessed, that Martha Parsons was herself enabled to keep from breaking down.

It was an hour before Johnny was sufficiently calm to be again laid in his crib. As soon as she could leave his side for a moment, she went to the window and tried to peer out into the darkness. She had placed one of the lamps in the window some hours before, hoping that it might prove a beacon to guide her husband if he was still living, which she was almost ready to doubt, so utterly desolate all things seemed.

Pressing her face close to the glass she endeavored to penetrate the awful gloom; but could only see for a few feet into the darkness. The rays of light from the lamps had power to penetrate no farther. It seemed to her, as she stood there, straining her eyes in a vain effort to see, that the darkness was a living thing, and that it devoured the rays of light bodily, or contended with them and slew them as they strove to make headway against the night. When the lamp burned low for an instant, and the light sent out through the window was less strong, she was almost sure she saw the darkness put out its hands and grasp the rays of light and strangle them.

Mingled with the steady swish of the falling rain, the roar of the water rushing through the ravine now came clear and distinct, and knowing it was all one's life was worth to attempt to cross it, she gave up all hope of seeing her husband that night, if ever again, and only prayed that he might be in a place of safety, and out of the reach of the elements that appeared as if about to swallow up the mountain.

It was a little past midnight, and as yet no one had returned. She was alone in the house, and the only light was from the lamp in the sitting-room. She was sitting by the fire, and the only sound was the crackling of the logs. She was thinking of her husband, and the only thought was of his safety. The Louisville Semi-Weekly Post.

PROSPECTUS.

During the past few months the demand for The Post has greatly increased in the country, its popularity being particularly marked in the interior of Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana. Some difficulty has been presented, however, because it could not reach remote sections as soon after publication as was desired, owing to the existing regulations that control the movement of trains, while in other sections it has enjoyed advantages over the morning papers in this respect, and we have been enabled to furnish a portion of our subscribers with the latest news from twelve to fifteen hours in advance of our contemporaries. In order to meet the difficulty suggested we have determined to issue a SEMI-WEEKLY edition, which will contain carefully selected news matter, full and accurate reports of the markets and other features which can not fail to render it attractive and almost indispensable to the farmers, merchants and to the general reader of the interior. We are enabled, too, to furnish this interesting edition to subscribers in any part of the country for only per annum. The cheapness of the SEMI-WEEKLY POST should cause no one to detract from its merits. The day for high-priced newspapers has passed. We have found that the cheaper the paper the more readers it has and the more its columns are sought by advertisers.

Terms invariably in advance.

boon ever bestowed upon man is perfect health, and the true way to insure health is to purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, 34 Arlington st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful purifier, it is very much superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. All persons of scrofulous or consumptive tendencies, and especially delicate children, are sure to be greatly benefited by its use." J. W. Starr, Laconia, Iowa, writes: "For years I was troubled with Scrofulous complaints. I tried several different preparations, which did me little, if any, good. Two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a complete cure. It is my opinion that this medicine is the best blood of the day." C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and unable to obtain relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have taken several bottles, am greatly benefited, and believe it to be the best of blood purifiers." R. Harris, Crook City, Ramsey Co., Dakota, writes: "I have been an intense sufferer, with Dyspepsia, for the past three years. Six months ago I began to use

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

DEATH OF VICE PRESIDENT HENDRICKS.

While our paper was in press on Wednesday evening, Nov 25th, the illustrious man whose name heads this short notice died suddenly and peacefully at his residence in Indianapolis, of paralysis of the heart and brain. The sad intelligence reached Louisa on the morning of the 26th, while all were feeling the glow of thankful hearts on the National holiday, and all men, were saddened by the mournful news, save one or two in whose hearts the venom of malice, doubly distilled, still lurks. We intend no panegyric on the lamented Vice President. We simply say he was a good man, a hero, a statesman, and in recognition of these qualities the Democratic party had exalted him to the second place in the Nation.

The death of Mr. Hendricks renders it possible for the Republican party to have one of its members fill the Vice Presidential chair, and that a Republican Senate, with a majority of eight, will fail to elect one of this political faith we cannot hope. The most prominent candidates are said to be Edmunds, Logan and Sherman, named in the order of their popularity. In our opinion Edmunds will not be the successful man, if Blaine has any friends in the United States Senate. During the National campaign of '84 Edmunds was mute as an oyster, although repeatedly solicited to take the stump for the Republican nominee, or even simply say through the press that he endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Blaine.

Black Jack Logan, if he has as much pride as a tumble bug, will not be a candidate, and that narrows the popular list to John Sherman. Sherman will take anything, if it be wrapped in a bloody shirt, and nothing would afford him greater pleasure than to preside over the Senate and by all possible means block the wheels of Democratic legislation. It is possible that at this juncture of political affairs serious complications may arise, and the Congress of the United States will do well to make such enactments as will put to rest forever the question of Presidential succession in various contingencies.

It gives us great pleasure to announce in this issue of the Big Sandy News the candidacy of Stephen Girard Kinner for the office of Commonwealth's Attorney for this Criminal District, subject to the action of a Democratic Convention. And it gives us equal pleasure to be able to write in terms of the highest commendation of the gentlemen who now offers himself for a re-election to the responsible position which for many years he has so ably filled. Although young as a man he is old as a lawyer and prosecutor, and the vigor of health and strength unite with experience and skill. And while he is by this happy combination enabled to cope successfully with the bright lights of the bar, his sterling integrity as an officer of the Commonwealth lifts him high above the suspicion of official wrong doing. In short we have always regarded Girard Kinner as a model Commonwealth attorney. We predict that he will be nominated and elected.

King Alphonso, of Spain, died last week of dissipation and disease.

If the Democrats instead of the Republicans, had the election of a Vice President our vote would be for Senator Beck, if he were eligible.

The President has his annual message in type and has read the proof. The first message of a Democratic President, the first in twenty-five years, will be looked for and read with unusual interest.

President Cleveland, acting upon the suggestions of representatives of both political parties, did not attend the funeral of the Vice President. Cranks, with the deadly knife and the ready revolver, are abroad in the land, and against railroad accidents there is no law.

The Chancellor of the Louisville Chancery Court has decided that the Masonic Temple Company is a charitable association, having for one of its beneficiaries the Masonic Widow's and Orphan's Home. It is therefore exempt from taxation. This decision of the Chancellor will greatly increase the revenues of the Home.

We notice that some of our Central Kentucky exchanges are speaking favorably of Frank Owens, of Maysville, as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor. The writer of this has known Mr. Owens over a quarter of a century, and is glad to testify to his high moral worth and character, we doubt, however, that he has any political aspirations whatever.

The steamer Emma Graham was sunk in the Ohio river at Ripley Landing, near Parkersburg, last Thursday night, and several deck hands and deck passengers were swept into the river and lost. In swinging into the landing the boat struck a barge loaded with staves. This crushed in her starboard side, and she sank in twenty feet of water.

The colored people of Kentucky held a convention at Lexington last Friday. A large number attended, every District in the State being represented. The object of the convention was to prepare a bill of rights for the consideration of the next Legislature. They want additional rights and privileges—not social equality, but a fair chance before the law. They also ask that the laws be so changed as to allow the organization of negro militia companies upon the same basis as those already organized. The probabilities are that the laws will not be so changed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—There is much speculation here about the probable choice of the Republican members of the Senate for President pro tem. of the Senate. The impression that Senator Edmunds does not desire the honor of the position is becoming more general. "Senator Allison," the Critic says this evening, "is authority for the statement that the question of the Presidency of the Senate is not likely to be formally considered until next Thursday or Friday evening, when a caucus of Republican Senators will be held. One of the most prominent and conservative Republican Senators said to-day that he had no doubt that the Presidency of the Senate would go to the West by caucus nomination. Senator Edmunds can undoubtedly have the Presidency of the Senate if he seeks it, but I am almost certain he does not. If he is not a candidate, Senator Logan is much more likely to be chosen than any other. The Republican party has expressed its desire that Senator Logan should preside over the sessions of the Senate, and that fact should have a great weight with Republican Senators. My judgment would be that Senator Logan will be chosen President pro tem. if he desires to be."

It was currently rumored to-day that Senator Logan had opened an active canvass for the Presidency of the Senate, but this was equally positively denied.

One prominent Senator said: "Senator Edmunds, Logan or Sherman would not make anything like a canvass in his own favor. The Senate is a peculiarly conservative body, and its leaders are dignified and conservative men, particularly in matters pertaining to the Senate itself. Senator Logan will not tell his colleagues that he desires to be elected, if such be the case, unless they ask him."

Senator Sherman's friends are confident that he will be selected if he permits it to be understood that he would accept the position.

The Democratic Senator to whom the complimentary vote for President pro tem. will be given is not known. There are very few Democratic Senators in the city, and among them Senator Harris, of Tennessee, is about the only person mentioned in that connection. Senator Cockrill says the Presidency of the Senate is in much doubt. He assumes that it will be a Republican, and either Edmunds, Logan or Sherman. Senator Gibbons says a Republican will of course be elected, but he does not know who. Senators Morgan, Jones (Ark.) and Ransom think Edmunds will again be President of the Senate.

How often do we hear of the sudden fatal termination of a case of croup, when a young life might have been saved by the prompt use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral! Be wise in time, and keep a bottle of it on hand, ready for instant use.

THE KENTUCKY DIALECT.

The early appearance is promised of a story of Kentucky life, the publishers of which appeal to the interest of the reading public by promising that the "Kentucky dialect" will be faithfully portrayed by the author. What this dialect may be like can not be known until the work appears. It may be the language of polite society in Louisville or Lexington; it may be the equally pure but less modern English of some of the smaller towns, remote from the railroads, where the Bible and Shakespeare and Dickens do more than the facile writers on the newspapers to mold the language of reading people.

ple; it may be the vernacular of the lumbermen and "moonshiners" of the mountains, who are without a literature. Be this as it may, there is nothing peculiar to Kentuckians in the point of vocabulary, while any differences in pronunciation or intonation will be impossible to commit to paper, unless it be in caricature.—Louisville Commercial.

The report is commented upon by the Eastern press as an excellent and most satisfactory exhibit of the affairs of the department.—Ky. Yeoman.

me of Dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since." L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for liver troubles and Indigestion, a good many years, and have always found them prompt and efficient in their action." Richard Norris, Lynn, Mass., writes: "After much suffering, I have been cured of Dyspepsia and liver troubles."

By Using

Ayer's Pills. They have done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken." John Bartlett, Troy, Iowa, writes: "For nearly two years my life was rendered miserable by the horrors of Dyspepsia. Medical treatment afforded me only temporary relief, and I became reduced in flesh, and very much debilitated. A friend of mine, who had been similarly afflicted, advised me to try Ayer's Pills. I did so, and with the happiest results. My food soon ceased to distress me, my appetite returned, and I became as strong and well as ever."

On last Sunday afternoon Uncle Jimmie Franklin, Miss Inez Ferguson and Miss Myrtle Chapman were baptized in the Big Sandy by Rev. Mr. Jolly, of the Baptist Church, in the presence of a very large congregation. Mr. Franklin is in his eighty-second year.

List of letters remaining in the Louisa post office uncalled for since Nov. 1st, 1885:

Monroe, Walter, W. H. Mills, Robert Niece, Fannie Neff, Isabella Murphy, John Frey, George W. Harless, R. J. McCarney. Persons calling for any of the above letters will please say advertised.

The protracted meeting held by the Baptists in the M. E. Church South is still going on. Great interest is being manifested, and about twenty additions have been made to the church. The church is crowded nightly to listen to the eloquent preaching of Brothers Jolly and Nunnally, and a deep religious feeling is plainly shown.

It is the intention of the Baptist brethren to build a church in Louisa, and to this end subscriptions are now being solicited, and we are glad to say with flattering results. Twenty per cent of the amount subscribed is due the first of March, 1886, forty per cent when the foundation is completed, and the remainder when the building is under roof.

After services Monday night the Baptists held a business meeting for the purpose of organizing themselves into a church and electing officers. Rev. Mr. Nunnally was chosen Moderator, and after a few remarks by him explanatory of the object and the duties of the various officers and committees, nominations were made and the following officers elected and committees appointed:

The Louisville Semi-Weekly Post.

PROSPECTUS.

During the past few months the demand for THE POST has greatly increased in the country, its popularity being particularly marked in the interior of Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana. Some difficulty has been presented, however, because it could not reach remote sections as soon after publication as was desired, owing to the existing regulations that control the movement of trains, while in other sections it has enjoyed advantages over the morning papers in this respect, and we have been enabled to furnish a portion of our subscribers with the latest news from twelve to fifteen hours in advance of our contemporaries. In order to meet the difficulty suggested we have determined to issue a SEMI-WEEKLY edition, which will contain carefully selected news matter, full and accurate reports of the markets and other features which can not fail to render it attractive and almost indispensable to the farmers, merchants and to the general reader of the interior. We are enabled, too, to furnish this interesting edition to subscribers in any part of the country for only

$1.25 per annum. The cheapness of the SEMI-WEEKLY POST should cause no one to detract from its merits. The day for high-priced newspapers has passed. We have found that the cheaper the paper the more readers it has and the more its columns are sought by advertisers. Terms invariably in advance.

THE EVENING POST CO., LOUISVILLE, KY.

boon ever bestowed upon man is perfect health, and the true way to insure health is to purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, 34 Arlington st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful purifier, it is very much superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. All persons of scrofulous or consumptive tendencies, and especially delicate children, are sure to be greatly benefited by its use." J. W. Starr, Leona, Iowa, writes: "For years I was troubled with Scrofulous complaints. I tried several different preparations, which did me little, if any, good. Two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a complete cure. It is my opinion that this medicine is the best blood of the day." C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and unable to obtain relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have taken several bottles, am greatly benefited, and believe it to be the best of blood purifiers." R. Harris, Crook City, Ramsey Co., Dakota, writes: "I have been an intense sufferer, with Dyspepsia, for the past three years. Six months ago I began to use

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It has effected an entire cure, and I am now as well as ever."
